The Titan Corporation Launches ItinerX™ a Mobile Enterprise Security System

SAN FRANCISCO, CA – February 15, 2005 – The Titan Corporation (NYSE:TTN), a leading national security solutions provider, announced today the launch of ItinerX™, a mobile enterprise security system. The announcement was made at the Fourteenth Annual RSA Conference — the world’s leading information security conference and expo — being held at the Moscone Center in San Francisco.

ItinerX, developed by Titan’s Information Security Systems Division (ISSD), enables secure storage, transmission and access of information in a mobile environment. With ItinerX, sensitive information is encrypted and stored on a USB memory device and synchronized securely to an enterprise server via a corporate or government network, as well as the Internet. ItinerX delivers this encryption functionality with a combination of security features, such as multiple access control, authentication, PKI certificates, digital signatures, and virus and spyware scanning — ensuring a comprehensive approach to data integrity. In addition, ItinerX enhances government and business processes by enabling the safe and easy portability of information with a built-in back-up system that prevents information loss or theft. With an easy-to-use Windows® environment requiring no formal training, ItinerX is applicable to any size enterprise.

“The Titan Corporation is excited about the security and mobility ItinerX provides to our users in an extremely easy to use and flexible system”, said Vic Lindberg, Vice President, Secure Solutions, Titan ISSD. “ItinerX protects information in motion from anywhere in the world utilizing a simple USB memory device.”
